Bill Powers, wife found dead in home

Calgary sports-media legend. Cops confirm a 'connection' between deceased and suspect in custody

Friends as well as current and former employers confirmed Calgary sports and media legend Bill Powers and his wife Donna Lee were found dead Thursday morning in a Braeside home they shared.

Investigators have not confirmed the identities of the deceased but said the bodies of a man and woman were discovered around 5:20 a.m. at a home in the 1700 block of 110 Avenue S.W.

Powers started his career with the Edmonton Journal as a general reporter and went on to become a voice for major sporting events in Calgary. He joined the former CHQR Radio in 1989 and worked there until retiring from day-to-day media life in 2009. He was heard by thousands during the pre-game, halftime and post-game shows for Calgary Stampeders games.

Recently, Powers started working as a columnist for the Cochrane Eagle, a weekly newspaper in the town west of Calgary, bringing with him his trademark sense of humour and his quirky look at everyday life.

His last offering ran in the Wednesday edition of the Eagle under the heading "All should take tinkle test," a piece musing about forcing welfare recipients to first consent to a urine test.

Jack Tennant, publisher of the Cochrane Eagle newspaper, knew Powers for four decades.

"Billy was crazy, but a good crazy," Tennant said. "Totally unpredictable type of guy — I loved the spontaneity.... He was never the type of guy that gave the indication he cared about anybody, but he really did. If I got into trouble, Billy would be the guy I'd call to bail me out."

Police, meanwhile, cordoned off a large area around the Powers residence Thurs-

The taximan cometh

A piece of the Stampede licence pie

Stampede time can mean big money for Calgary bars and nightclubs, but the chair of a taxi advisory committee says a portion of the fees paid to erect temporary party sites should be devoted to transporting guests to and from venues.

The taxi industry is footing a $30,000 bill to set up temporary, 24-hour cab zones along 5 Street S.E. and 14 Avenue N.E., and a staging area for drivers to rest and eat between calls.

But Jonathon Campbell, chair of the taxi limousine advisory committee, believes the initiative could serve as a model to overcome complaints about poor service during events like Stampede and New Year's Eve. He says a portion of licensing fees collected by the city should be kicked to the taxi industry to help cover costs associated with improving conditions. "It comes out of the industry coffer, but the city reaps the reward of the parties," Campbell said.

Ald. John Mar said he sees merit in the idea, but believes arrangements could be worked out between bars and cabs. "I'm open to things that would help to make sure Calgarians are not drinking and driving," he said.

Wayne Leong, owner of Melrose Cafe & Bar, said he might be willing to enter an agreement with a broker depending on the details. He believes, however, the best solution is simply having the city approve more cab licences. "To me, it's still a supply-and-demand issue." JEREMY NOLAIS/METRO

'Switch the picture.' $600K ad campaign to remind the world Calgary's doors are open

Calgary's doors are open — that's the message the city's tourism-marketing agency will spend roughly $600,000 promoting over the next three weeks.

Tourism Calgary CEO Cindy Ady said the goal of the ad campaign is to "switch the picture" of Calgary in the minds of people across Canada and around the world, from one of flood and devastation to one of renewal.

Mayor Naheed Nenshi will be "the star" of the campaign, Ady said, which will run internationally to some extent but focus primarily on Canadian markets.

"A lot of people in the country think that we're still underwater," Nenshi said. "But really we are back. The restaurants are open, the hotels are open and we're ready to welcome the visitors."

The ads will run in a variety of media, including newspapers, radio and online.

Summer tourism contributes $1.4 billion to local businesses, according to Tourism

Calgary.

Alberta Tourism Minister Richard Starke welcomed the ad campaign, noting Calgary has been receiving a lot of national and international attention lately due to the flooding, but the outside perception may not have caught up with the local reality.

"It's an important message that Calgary's open for business and we're ready to welcome the world," he said.

City's state of emergency ends as Stampede begins

Turning point. While much work remains, mayor marks important 'symbolism' of these two events coinciding

ROBSON FLETCHER

An hour before Calgary's local state of emergency expired Thursday morning, Mayor Naheed Nenshi stepped onto a Stephen Avenue stage and addressed the first pancake breakfast of the Stampede.

He told the crowd about the helicopter ride he took over the flooded city two weeks earlier, and recalled seeing how "the Elbow River (had) carved a new channel directly through the middle of the Stampede infield."

He admitted he was worried then, and wondered how the city — including the Stampede — would ever recover from such a disaster.

"But I didn't have to worry," Nenshi said. "Because, while I have a lot of powers under the state of local emergency, I don't have the power to hold back the spirit of Calgary and the spirit of the volunteers of the Stampede."

As the minutes ticked down to the 10:16 a.m. expiration deadline, the mayor busied himself posing for photos, hugging citizens and flipping pancakes.

In practical terms, little changed when the state of emergency finally lapsed, but in a larger sense, the mayor said the timing couldn't have been better.

"Symbolically, us saying we're no longer in emergency is a really big thing," Nenshi said. "For people to say, 'All right, I can take a breath. It's not wrong for me to take a day off and enjoy the Stampede.'"

And that's what Stampede organizers hope will happen.

"We just want to share the Stampede experience with everybody," said publicity manager Jennifer Booth. "Calgary and the surrounding areas in southern Alberta really showed their spirit over the past 10 days, and now we want to take the opportunity to really come together and show that spirit to the world."

Lending a helping hand. Volunteers come out to assist in High River

Volunteers were called to two Calgary locations Thursday to begin cleanup in the flood-ravaged areas of High River.

Though turnout wasn't high, those who did turn up were ready to work hard.

"If I ever needed help, people would be there for me, so I need to be there for them," said Airdrie resident Dawn Peterson, who was visibly touched describing the devastation she's seen in High River.

Peterson and her friend Mellisa Kennedy came in from Airdrie to a bus, host to maybe a dozen other volunteers ready to get to work.

Another volunteer on the bus was Calgary resident Daniel Lepage. Lepage has family in High River who have still not been allowed back in their home.

"Seeing it all on the TV, it doesn't affect you as much, and now it really clicks when it's right at home here," he said. "I'm hoping to do some heavy lifting for people."

Volunteer organizers believed the shuttle service would only be provided Thursday.

Alberta toughens penalties to discourage scams

The Alberta government has fast-tracked increased penalties to try to discourage scammers from taking advantage of people rebuilding after heavy flooding. Fines are now set at $100,000 for unscrupulous business practices.

The changes were originally to be made this fall to the Fair Trading Act.

Service Alberta Minister Manmeet Bhullar is reminding businesses to treat customers fairly and to not misrepresent their qualifications. A government website has tips on home inspectors and renovation companies.

Canoe capsized

Two clung to rock for about 16 hours before rescue

Two people clung to a rock for about 16 hours in the middle of a river in north-western Alberta after their canoe capsized.

Mounties say the two were part of a tour group in canoes travelling along the Athabasca River near Edson, about a two-hour drive west of Edmonton.

RCMP say the two, along with two others, got separated from the group Wednesday afternoon.

The tour group found two of the people on the shore and airdropped them supplies, but it did not realize the other two were stranded on the river.

Residents warned to brace for shock

High River. Recovery task force head says 'be prepared to see your house in a pretty shocking state, frankly'

People from the most flooded-out neighbourhoods in High River are being allowed to see the damage and pick up a few belongings as reconstruction crews feverishly prepare accommodations for those whose houses are too mud-caked and water-warped to live in.

The province says crews have managed to pump out water in the Sunshine Meadows district more quickly than expected and access is now possible. The area has been described as a giant bowl and water collected there the most when the Highwood River burst its banks two weeks ago.

"We're going to allow people to go back to their homes to take a look ... and our fervent recommendation is that you take a look at your house, you assess the safety of entering and grab critical belongings," Shane Schreiber, head of the High River recovery task force, said at an update on Thursday.

He warned people that they should brace themselves because many of their houses are badly damaged.

"I just caution that it'll be a bit of a shock," Schreiber said. "Be prepared to see your house in a pretty shocking state, frankly."

He advised residents to get advice from structural engineers as to whether their homes are safe to live in.

"Some of these houses you may be able to remediate them once you get that structural assessment, but many of them have been under water for a number of days.

"There's no way you can go back to some of these houses right now."

A bus tour was being organized for the adjacent neighbourhood of Hampton Hills — still under water — so that people could at least get a look at their properties.

"That's why we can't allow residents back in. It's still too dangerous," he said. "Those floors, the construction materials have probably significantly deformed and there's a very real danger of people going in their homes, falling through the floor and being trapped in a watery basement."

"We're not willing to risk that."

About 1,000 of High River's

Work continues

Schreiber explained that nearly 500,000 litres are being pumped out of the Hamptons every minute — about 500 million litres daily — and levels are going down 15 centimetres a day. But the "lake" that the area has essentially become is still at least a metre deep on streets and the first floor of buildings.

7,000 homes are in the two areas. More than 6,000 of the town's 13,000 people have already returned to other parts of the town to begin mopping up.

The province is looking at three phases of accommodation for evacuees whose homes are too damaged to live in.

St. Patrick's Bridge could be set back for up to a year

Flood damage. As well, 650 residents in three towers will be displaced for weeks

KATIE TURNER
katie.turner@metronews.ca

Just two weeks ago, the St. Patrick's Bridge had been scheduled to open this fall. Now the bridge may be delayed for up to a year because of the flooding on the Bow River.

Michael Brown, president and CEO of the Calgary Municipal Land Corporation (CMLC) — the group charged with redeveloping the East Village — said it hopes to have a further assessment done in the next two weeks.

"By the end of July, we should know what's salvageable on the bridge and what's not," he said.

Construction on St. Patrick's Island had begun only two weeks before the flood, and plans shouldn't change much, Brown said.

An announcement of new retail space in the historic Simmons Building is planned for July 17, despite basement flooding.

Trinity Place Foundation is asking residents of the towers to call their hotline at 403-269-3183 to inform them of their whereabouts.

Construction continues on several projects, including the National Music Centre and two condo developments, all of which are in the early stages and won't be delayed significantly.

The 4th Street underpass is operating again, but Brown said the CMLC will have to replace a pump that was overwhelmed during the flood. He was unable to provide a cost estimate of the damage.

Even though infrastructure in the area held up, three residential towers housing some 650 seniors are expected to remain empty for another four to six weeks, says a spokesperson for the housing group.

Lisa Rushka with Trinity Place Foundation, which manages Edwards Tower, Murdoch Manor and George C. King Tower, said the mechanical rooms in the three towers were badly damaged.

"The engineers on those inspections have advised us that it is not safe and it's not reasonable to expect to re-occupy those buildings until the mechanical structures are fixed."

She said alternative accommodation is available at Olds College and Ambrose College.

Aftermath. Flood-displaced renters have options

Tenants frustrated by being denied access to their flood-ravaged apartments are urged to take photographs of the damage, attempt to work out a written agreement with their landlords and ask insurance providers what they can do.

This comes as Calgary officials estimate hundreds could be displaced for months, and even a year, due to heavy flood damage.

Gerry Baxter, executive director of the Calgary Residential Rental Association, said tenants with lease problems can always turn to the province-run Residential Tenancy Dispute Resolution Service.

"Many landlords, I would think, are going to be very forgiving and understanding that the tenants need to move on," Baxter said. "Some may want to argue it."

A common frustration last weekend among people waiting in line at Connaught School for a preloaded emergency debit card was a lack of communication from landlords on the state of their buildings.

"Management hasn't said anything," said Chris Barembuch. "We got sick of it.... We've already found another place."

The sky's no limit for Telus

Telus released details on Thursday of its plan to build a 58-storey, 750,000-square-foot skyscraper in downtown Calgary.

Dubbed Telus Sky, the $400-million building will roughly match the height of The Bow, the company says.

Telus CEO Darren Entwistle said it will "stand as a lasting symbol of our passionate commitment to the Calgary community, our customers, our team members and to the province of Alberta."

The tower will be built on a site that includes the current Art Central building.

Telus Sky's LEED Platinum certification will transform "the entire 7th Avenue block into one of the most technologically innovative and environmentally friendly sites in North America," the company says in a news release.

The building will feature 430,000 square feet of office space, 341 rental homes and retail space.

"We know Calgarians want their downtown core to thrive — the recent floods showed us just how much the area matters to this city," Premier Alison Redford said in a statement. "Today's announcement is a reminder to all Calgarians that they live in a truly world-class city that is getting better by the day."

The project is expected to be finished by the fall of 2017.

ROBSON FLETCHER/METRO

Other features

- Telus Sky will include a 5,500-square-foot public art gallery showcasing the work of local artists.
- The building will use 80 per cent less energy than developments of a similar size, the company says.

Looking forward

To me, the timing of Stampede couldn't be any better. Whether you're still displaced, or you've been volunteering, the fact is, many Calgarians need something to look forward to.

Pretty much since this time last year, we've been talking about this year's Stampede. That's what we do in Calgary; talking about the upcoming greatest outdoor show on earth is the go-to ice breaker, even if it's 11 months away.

But, as you've probably guessed, this year's Stampede will be unlike any other. By all accounts, the event itself will be the same, save for most of the Saddledome events being cancelled. But just outside of the gates lies a fresh new group of Calgarians who are homeless. They represent every demographic and every income level. Which is why some might say there are lots of reasons not to hold the Stampede this year. After all, what Calgary has gone through the last two weeks has been insane; it's been exhausting and heartbreaking. How can we hold a celebration that to some is filled with exuberance and poorly timed celebration?

To me, the timing of Stampede couldn't be any better. Whether you're still displaced, or you've been volunteering, the fact is, many Calgarians need something to look forward to.

The mayor and health professionals have been talking a lot about mental health and that's because what they went through, what we all went through, was pretty crazy. Seeing some of our most iconic buildings under water is not normal. Emptying your entire house after it's been drowned in muddy water is not normal. Going through a stranger's photos, trying to save at least one of them, is not normal.

In fact, as crazy as Stampede gets, at least it's probably the most normal thing that will happen in Calgary this month. Beyond feeling like we all could use the break and eat at least a dozen double-bacon corn dogs, we have a closet full of Stampede clothes that are aching to be worn at least once this year.

The flood caused Calgarians to look at the Stampede in an entirely different light. When faced with not having it, thousands of people stepped up to make sure our city's biggest legacy would continue. Admit it, there's no way anyone thought that the Ertlon and Stampede stations would be open in time for Stampede. We all saw those photos of the twisty tracks that were left when the waters receded.

Yet, somehow, this past Wednesday, the south line of the LRT opened up. The fact that the pathways, the roads and really, neighbourhoods, that have been rebuilt in the past 10 days is nothing short of a Stampede miracle.

After 101 years, the next 10 days will be like no other Stampede before. And that's because there's never before been Calgarians like us. Surviving what we did only made us stronger. And together, we can survive whatever the Young Canadians throw at us.

Cops rev up search for missing girl

Madeleine McCann.

Scotland Yard keeps family's hopes alive as they search for multiple 'persons of interest' in 2007 disappearance

Scouring Europe

"(Police) continue to believe that there is a possibility that Madeleine is alive."

Detective Chief Inspector Andy Redwood

British police say they have launched a full investigation into the disappearance of Madeleine McCann, and want to trace 38 "persons of interest" in the case.

Detectives say it's possible that Madeleine, who vanished from a Portuguese holiday resort six years ago, is still alive.

Scotland Yard said Thursday that 12 of the individuals of interest are British, and the rest are from a variety of European countries. The force says it is working with governments across the continent to find out more.

McCann vanished from a vacation home in Portugal's Algarve region on May 3, 2007, days before her fourth birthday. The case has generated intense media interest.

Detective Chief Inspector Andy Redwood said police "continue to believe that there is a possibility that Madeleine is alive."

Killer of 2-year-old out on parole once again

One of Britain's most notorious child killers will be paroled a second time after he was sent back to prison over a child-pornography conviction.

Jon Venables was 11 years old when he was convicted along with another boy of abducting 2-year-old James Bulger from a shopping centre and beating him to death by an isolated railway line in northern England in 1993.

The two killers — who were 10 years old at the time of the crime — were given life sentences, but were released on parole in 2001 after being given new identities to protect them.

An undated photo of a young Jon Venables. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The move sparked a contentious debate in Britain, where memories of the murder have remained sharp.

Venables was jailed again in 2010 after pleading guilty to downloading and distributing dozens of indecent images of children. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Parents

Earlier this year, 2-year-old James's mother, Denise Fergus, and father, Ralph Bulger, both addressed a parole hearing and pushed for Venables to remain in prison.

• Ralph Bulger's lawyer, Robin Makin, said in a statement that his client is "disappointed and dismayed" by the "reckless decision" to release Venables.

Candidate in Montreal's mayoral race, Michel Brule, considers Americans dumb, obese, imbecilic and classless ignoramuses. METRO FILE

Montreal mayoral candidate considers Americans dumb

Race for mayor. Michel Brule is not considered to be among the front-runner candidates

Here's some Fourth of July news for our U.S. neighbours: a man running for mayor of Montreal considers Americans dumb, obese, imbecilic, classless ignoramuses.

Staunch Quebec independentiste Michel Brule announced Thursday his long-shot candidacy for the November election.

The book publisher, writer, and ex-bar owner says he doesn't expect English-speaking Montrealers to vote for him — and says he isn't working to get their support, anyway.

He has written extensively

Quoted

"If I say Americans are a bunch of big, obese, imbecilic, ignorant, uncultured dummies, it's the truth."

Michel Brule
Speaking to Metro newspaper in 2009

in the past about English, which he says is not a nice language. For example, he points to the capitalized first-person singular in English — "I" — as a sign of individualism.

In a recent piece for Le Devoir — titled "For or against Anglo-American cultural imperialism?" — he bemoans the omnipresence of English culture and says the language of Paul McCartney is also the language of the genocide of aboriginal peoples and the Acadian deportations.

And he appears less than enamoured with Americans. He told Metro newspaper in 2009 that not all Americans are dumb, obese, imbecilic, uncultured ignoramuses — only about 80 per cent of them.

"If I say Americans are a bunch of big, obese, imbecilic, ignorant, uncultured dummies, it's the truth," he told the newspaper.

"Of course it's a sure bet that out of 303 million Americans, there are maybe 50 million who aren't like that. But, collectively, they're still a bunch of uncultured imbeciles."

It's unclear what sort of a constituency Brule's message might gain him.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Metro interview in 2009

Not a fan of Anglo culture

Michel Brule has said in the past that he doesn't have anything against Anglos on an individual level. He says he could even have one as a girlfriend.

But still, he says, it's not a very nice culture.

"English is not a nice language," he told Metro newspaper in 2009, while promoting his published essay on the scourge of English.

"Intolerance and all the most extremist, racist, segregationist movements — they're the KKK, white power, the expression 'Speak white', these are all English things. They come from the United States, Canada, England."

In a January 2013 opinion piece published in Le Devoir, he took a jab at a Beatle.

He bemoaned the fact that when Paul McCartney played on the Plains of Abraham in 2008, and a prominent nationalist politician complained about an English show on the old battlefield where the French were defeated in 1759, that politician drew considerable ridicule while McCartney played to a monster crowd.

'Extraordinary' plane that runs on the sun soon to end U.S. journey

Solar Impulse.

'Pioneering is not only what you do. It's how you think,' says pilot

The Solar Impulse, a revolutionary solar-powered plane, is about to end a slow and symbolic journey across America by quietly buzzing the Statue of Liberty and landing in a city whose buildings often obscure the power-giving sun.

Top speed? 73 km/h.

The pilots view themselves as green pioneers — promoting lighter materials, solar-powered batteries and conservation as sexy and adventurous. They want people to feel a thrill while saving the planet.

If there's one person who knows about adventure and what it means to Earth, it's Bertrand Piccard.

He already was the first

person to fly around the world non-stop in a balloon, but that wasn't really enough. So Piccard found a way to explore by looking inward and acting globally.

"It's important to understand that pioneering is not only what you do. It's how you think. It's a state of mind more than action," said Piccard, who is also a psychiatrist.

Solar Impulse has been to San Francisco, Phoenix, Dallas,

St. Louis, Cincinnati and Washington. All that's left is New York's JFK Airport and Piccard talked about having to wait his turn to land with all the big jets.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The mechanics

Adding a whole new dimension

Although it's promoted as solar-powered, what really pushes the envelope with this plane is its miserly energy efficiency, said Solar Impulse CEO Andre Borschberg, one of the two pilots who take turns flying Solar Impulse.

Parts of its wings are three times lighter than paper. Its one-person cockpit is beyond tiny. Borschberg lowers himself gingerly into it for a television camera, grimaces, and practically wears the plane, it is so snug on him.

Most of the 11,000 solar cells are on the super-long wings that seem to stretch as far as a jumbo jet's.

It weighs about the size of a small car, and soars at 30,000 feet (10,000 metres) with what is essentially the power of a small motorized scooter.

When it landed at Dulles International Airport in suburban Washington after midnight on June 15, its wings were lit with 16 LED lights that used less power than two 100-watt bulbs.

"We can use much less energy than we use today without the sacrifice," Borschberg said.

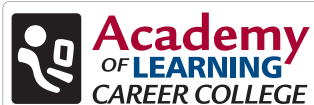

"And that's really important." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Departing ministers leave open cabinet

Harper caucus.

A major shuffle is expected as some senators step down

Prime Minister Stephen Harper is getting more blank space on his canvas to draw up a new cabinet, as the number of departing ministers risers.

A major shuffle is expected this month and will include the people Harper wants to be standard-bearers for the policies the party will take into the 2015 election. The prime minister has asked his caucus to let him know their re-election plans as he considers who will get seats at the cabinet table.

Marjory LeBreton, government leader in the Senate, said Thursday she's giving up her post. Diane Ablonczy, minister of state for foreign affairs, said she won't run in 2015.

Earlier this week, Ted Menzies, minister of state for finance, said he won't run again. Last month, Fisheries Minister Keith Ashfield asked to be relieved as he fights cancer.

Prospects

- Calgary MP Michelle Rempel and Ontario's Chris Alexander, both parliamentary secretaries, are among the names often raised as potential candidates for promotion.

Public Safety Minister Vic Toews is also expected to retire, but he has not yet made a formal announcement.

The prime minister is already signalling one structural change to the cabinet as a direct response to the Senate expense scandal that is dogging his government.

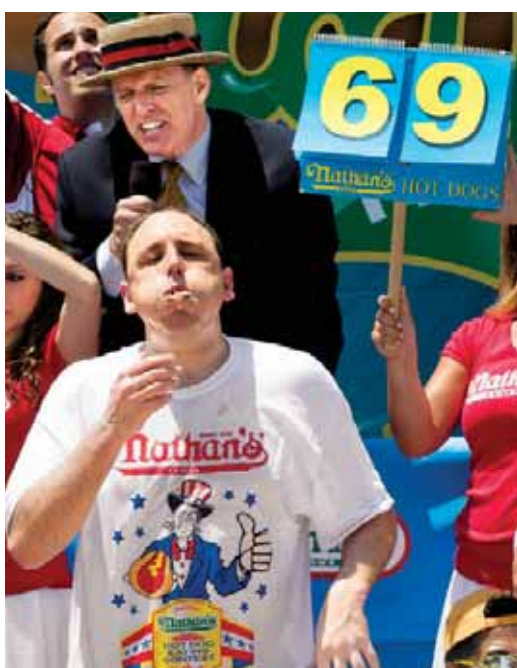

Whoever replaces LeBreton as the government leader in the upper chamber will not be a member of the cabinet, a government source said on condition of anonymity.

The government has recently amped up its rhetoric on bringing in an elected Senate.

"The next Senate leader will not be a member of the ministry, so that would leave us with a 100 per cent elected cabinet," said the source.

18 kg of cocaine found in Pearson airport bathroom

Border officials say they've discovered more than 18 kilograms of cocaine stashed in a bathroom at Toronto's Pearson airport June 17.

California. Police face angry threats over video of officer shooting dog Angry threats have been pouring into a Southern California police station after a video that was widely circulated on the Internet showed a uniformed officer fatally shooting a Rottweiler four times Sunday, police said.

The shooting occurred after police surrounded a home where a gunman reportedly robbed two people.

The dog's owner, Leon Rosby, said police needlessly killed his dog. His lawyer said Rosby's complaint will be added to an existing lawsuit

YouTube

A cellphone video on YouTube shows the dog, Max, scrambling out of a car's back seat through a window and lunging at officers who had handcuffed its master. Officers appear to try to control the dog for several seconds and one makes a grab for the dog's leash before the dog jumps up and the shots ring out.

Rosby has against police.

China landslide

Grandma uses body to shield kid

A Chinese grandmother died while apparently using her body to shield her 15-month-old granddaughter from a landslide that crushed their house in southwestern China's Sichuan province, state media reported Thursday.

The child was pulled from the rubble after being trapped for seven hours.

The grandmother, Pan Guofen, formed an arch by kneeling on all fours, her hands clenched into fists. Reports said her head was crushed by a brick.

'He's basically gone,' says Mandela's biographer

Graca Machel.

Wife says former president sometimes uncomfortable but seldom in pain

Nelson Mandela is being kept alive by a breathing machine and faces "impending death," court documents show, as his family gravesite was restored Thursday.

Mandela's health is "perilous" and he is being kept alive on life support, according to documents filed in the court case that resulted in the remains of the former president's three deceased children being reburied Thursday in their original graves.

"He's basically gone," said Charlene Smith, an authorized biographer of the former anti-apartheid leader. "He's not there. He's not there."

A younger person put on mechanical ventilation — life support — can be weaned off the machine and recover, but that can be difficult or impossible for an older person. The longer a person is on ventilation, the less the chance of recovery, said the chief executive of the Faculty of Consulting Physicians of South Africa.

In Mandela's hometown, Qunu, on Thursday, the bodies of three of his children were returned to their original resting site. The reburial took place in Qunu, where Mandela grew up and where the former president has said he wants to be buried.

Grandson Mandla Mandela moved the bodies to his village of Mvezo — Nelson Mandela's birthplace — in 2011. The two towns are about 25 kilometres apart. Fifteen Mandela family members pursued court action last week to force the grandson to move the bodies back to their original burial site.

The bitter family feud comes as Mandela remains in critical condition nearly a month after being hospitalized for a recurring lung infection. Mlawu Tyatyeka, an expert on the Xhosa culture of Mandela's family, said the court case over the graves was decided quickly because the family knows that Mandela will soon die.

"It's not a case of wishing him to die. It's a case of making sure that by the time he dies, his dying wish has been fulfilled," he said. "We have a belief that should you ignore a dying wish, all bad will befall you." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Military scrapped plans for Tim Hortons overseas

Taste of home. Idea of mobile Tim's fleet for troops ultimately abandoned by DND

The Department of National Defence is abandoning plans for three mobile, deployable Tim Hortons outlets, denying Canadian troops that familiar taste of home on future overseas missions.

As Canada's combat mission in Afghanistan was winding down in 2011, military officials proposed making it standard practice to have trailer-sized units on hand to sling coffee and donuts to soldiers.

A Tim's outlet at Kandahar Airfield, which operated for five years, generated $7.1 million in gross profit, much of which was plowed back into military support and services programs after expenses were paid.

The proposal to have trailers ready to go for other extended deployments was energetically endorsed by the country's overseas commander, according to documents obtained by The Canadian Press under the Access to Information Act.

The idea was abandoned when it was weighed against the $100,000 per trailer cost of construction, and the fact the units could be assembled within two months should future commanders decide they want one. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Egypt swears in interim president

Top judge takes reins.
Muslim Brotherhood leader arrested amid fears of violent backlash

A senior judge was sworn in as Egypt's interim president Thursday to replace ousted Islamist President Mohamed Morsi as the military launched a major crackdown against the Muslim Brotherhood. Reeling from what it called a military coup against democracy, the group said it would not work with the new political system.

The sweep against the Brotherhood leadership included the group's top leader, General Guide Mohammed Badie. He was arrested late Wednesday at a Mediterranean coastal city and flown by helicopter to Cairo, security officials said.

The move against the Brotherhood raises deep questions over how Islamists will fit into Egypt's new political system after the military on Wednesday swept out Morsi, the country's first freely elected president. The army says it did so in the name of millions of Egyptians who had taken to the streets, demanding Morsi be removed.

In the first step toward setting up a post-Morsi leadership, the chief judge of the Supreme Constitutional Court Adly Mansour took the oath as interim president before his fellow judges at the court.

There are fears of a violent backlash from Islamists against the army move, particularly from hard-liners, some of whom belong to former armed militant groups.

Clashes between Islamists and police erupted in multiple places around the country after the army's announcement of Morsi's removal Wednesday night, leaving at least nine dead.

'Repressive' policies?

Military cracks down on media

Egyptian authorities shut down four Islamist TV stations, banned the Muslim Brotherhood's newspaper and raided the office of Al-Jazeera's Egypt affiliate in a crackdown on media considered sympathetic to ousted President Mohamed Morsi, bringing an outcry Thursday from rights groups, who said the moves appeared to be an attempt to intimidate pro-Morsi media and shut off their viewpoints.

Among the shuttered stations was the Misi25 channel, run by the Brotherhood. It went off the air Wednesday night just as it was airing pro-Morsi protesters chanting, "Down with military rule" after Egypt's military chief announced that Morsi had been removed.

Also targeted was Al-Jazeera Live Egypt, or Mubasher Misi, an affiliate of the Qatar-based Al-Jazeera TV network. Late Wednesday night, police raided the station's offices, detaining 28 staffers, Al-Jazeera said in a statement Thursday. All have since been released, except the managing director and the broadcast engineer. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

'Tenacious.' B.C. woman survives 4 days at sea on rainwater, seabird

KATE WEBB
Metro in Vancouver

A woman from Grand Forks, B.C., who was lost at sea off the coast of Honduras for four days, says it's a "miracle" she and eight friends survived living off of rainwater and a seabird.

Tasha Brown, 20, and her group set out on an island expedition for fun on Saturday, but on the way, their nine-metre boat ran out of gas.

After several unsuccessful attempts to flag down other boats, they decided to take a break for the night and go to sleep.

"In the morning we wake up and the drift had taken us out and it's open water everywhere we are," Brown told Metro.

"So people started talking like, 'Man, this could get serious. We don't got water. We don't got food, we don't got gas.'"

The group determined their position by watching the movement of the sun and started to paddle for land. Brown — whose mother describes her as "tenacious" — also took turns getting out of the boat and towing it while swimming, despite the fact they were in shark-infested waters.

"I tell you, the days were the longest days of our lives," she said. "But I'd rather die being eaten by a shark than die lying down."

A storm eventually provided them with fresh water, and one of the men on board also caught a seabird mid-air and roasted it on the sizzling hood of the boat. Brown said it tasted like "turkey jerky."

By Wednesday morning, a U.S. Coast Guard plane had spotted the sunburned bunch and a rescue helicopter soon followed. U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Gabe Somma said they were found about 88 kilometres northwest of Utila, Honduras.

"We all just screamed," Brown recalled of that moment. "Almost all of us were crying, like, 'Yes! We're going to be OK.' It was amazing."

Brown is a medic and was in Honduras doing a rescue diving course. She missed her flight home because of the ordeal, but is expected to return to B.C. within the next few days.

The search for Brown, two Americans and six Hondurans spanned more than 11,600 square kilometres, and involved the Honduran navy, the U.S. Coast Guard and aircraft attached to the U.S. Southern Command in Honduras. WITH FILES FROM THE CANADIAN PRESS

Glassing around on the streets of London

Wearable computers.

A Metro reporter tries Google's high-tech specs — and feels like a Borg

SCOTT TAYLOR
Metro in London, Ont.

It's pretty cool. That's about as tech savvy as I get, but it's also an apt description of the new Google Glass.

Most people have at least seen pictures of it by now. You wear the device like glasses, but use it like a smartphone. There are no lenses, but there is a small screen above your right eye from which emanates the world — as both you, and Google, would like to see it.

Basically anything that can be done on a smartphone can be done with Google Glass. You can surf the web, make calls, send emails and texts, shoot photos and take video.

Voices.com CEO David Ciccarelli is one of a handful of people in Canada known as Glass Explorers, who earned the right to be Google guinea pigs by winning a draw — and paying $1,500 for the product. He's now showing the gizmo off to others, including yours truly from Metro London.

The device doesn't feel intrusive because the frame is lightweight titanium and, as mentioned, there are no lenses to smudge. There's also no ear-

Don't be a 'glasshole'

- Yep, that phrase has already been coined for Google Glass users who don't follow unofficial etiquette rules for the specs. That includes recording videos and snapping pics on the sly.

- This week, Google put out a set of FAQs aimed at clearing up confusion about the product. Topics include facial recognition, and how non-Glass users can tell if a picture or video is being taken.

piece because sound is transmitted via bone conduction.

You look up to see the screen, which can be controlled, for the most part, with voice commands. Initially, it looks to be about the size of a postage stamp, but it seems to grow and become easier to see with each passing second.

Looking at a photo of myself wearing Glass, though, I was reminded of the Borg from Star Trek: The Next Generation.

Yes, people will walk into trees and some will video people and things they shouldn't, but for a first stab at a wearable computer, it's pretty cool.

No, it's not a scene from Minority Report. It's Metro London's Scott Taylor trying out one of the hottest tech trends not yet on the market.

Carney watch. BoE explains reason for interest rate policy

Mark Carney is already causing ripples in Britain in his first week as governor of the Bank of England, even though his methods would be considered old hat in Canada.

Eschewing past practice, the British central bank went beyond simply announcing no changes to the 0.5 per cent key interest rate Thursday as it also published a statement explaining the reasoning and suggesting rates would remain depressed for some time.

The dovish statement had the effect of boosting equity prices in England and dropping the pound one cent to $1.51 US.

Under the previous governor, Mervyn King, the bank's Monetary Policy Committee would typically issue no comment when policy was left unchanged. But instead the central bank gave some indication where matters are heading by declaring that "the implied rise in the expected future path of bank rate was not warranted by the recent developments in the domestic economy."

It also said it would provide an assessment next month on whether the bank should use forward guidance — a tool Carney introduced in Canada in the spring of 2009 to give markets and investors long-term assurance on interest rate expectations. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Compensation fight

Air Canada's bumping payout 'unreasonable'

Air Canada's proposed compensation for passengers bumped off domestic flights is "unreasonable," says consumer advocate Gabor Lukacs, who successfully convinced the Canadian Transportation Agency that passengers are entitled to higher payments. The airline proposed last week that passengers should be entitled to between $100 and $800 depending on their airfare and length of delay. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Media mogul Rupert Murdoch has been recorded saying wrongdoing by his British newspapers was "next to nothing" and apparently acknowledging that his reporters paid police officers for information.

In a tape published in transcript by the ExaroNews journalism website and broadcast Wednesday on the U.K.'s Channel 4 News, Murdoch is heard saying, "it's the biggest inquiry ever, over next to nothing."

SNOWDEN'S NEXT MOVE A BLOCKBUSTER

This week's Metro List proves, once again, that life imitates art, truth is stranger than fiction, and I'm not making any of this up.

1 Superman is dating Penny from The Big Bang Theory. Great Caesar's ghost! Man of Steel Henry Cavill (although some critics who have seen the latest Superman movie call him the Man of Lead) is dating Kaley Cuoco, who plays Sheldon Cooper's desirable but dumb neighbour on the sitcom that made it OK to wear a pocket protector and tape on your glasses.

2 The Lone Ranger and his sidekick, Captain Jack Sparrow. I have a confession to make. I am old enough to remember when the Lone Ranger was my most favourite show in the whole world... on radio. And then one day, my dad came home with a TV. I thought it was a miracle that I could see Tonto—for real. But the real miracle is the new movie version and Johnny Depp

THE METRO LIST
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

Of course, these days, Snowden's more like Waldo, as in "where's Waldo?"

who has turned the painfully earnest Tonto into a wisecracking, walking totem pole of comic relief with a dead bird on his head. Not just feathers, mind you, but the whole bird.

3 The ballad of Edward Snowden. They seek him here, they seek him there, that damned elusive whistle blower. Now, the next place we may see him is on the big screen. Director Phillip Noyce has a novel way of, er, looking at it: "A movie that's playing out before our eyes, even though we can't see anything." Of course, Snowden's 'look' will undergo a transformation. Noyce wants Liam Hemsworth in the starring role, who looks more like the hunk in the Hunger Games than Snowden, who looks more like the unashamedly geeky wunderkid Sheldon Cooper.

4 Home-grown Helter Skelter. All terrorists aren't created equal. Some, like the self-styled Surrey-based jihadists Mujahid and Pirate NinjaCat, a.k.a. John Nuttall and his sidekick Amanda Korody, don't have the jam to clean the cat litter box. According to one erstwhile acquaintance, the couple, who were arrested for trying to plant Canada Day improvised explosive devices at the B.C. Legislature, were even thrown out of a local mosque—for worshipping weirdly. They lived in complete squalor and appear to spend their spare time paint-balling the TV into submission.

5 You think that was weird? How about this? Two generations of really bad tunes came together over the weekend when Chad Kroeger, the main perp of Nickelback, and one-hit wonder Avril Lavigne got married in secret in Mandelieu in the south of France. There was actually no reason for them to get married in secret. It's not like they were Kim Kardashian or somebody really, like, famous.

Teacher, disco garb stayin' alive

Texas man's school photos go viral

Dallas teacher Dale Irby and his disco-style wardrobe are rocking the Internet.

For 40 years, the recently retired Texas school teacher has worn the same outfit in every school picture: A groovy polyester shirt and toffee-coloured V-neck wool sweater vest.

"Hilarious," was a word often repeated on Twitter as his story went viral. "Can't stop smiling," said another.

Irby, who lives in Garland, Texas, recently retired as a gym teacher from Prestonwood Elementary School, along with his wife, Cathy, whom he met when they were first-year teachers in Dallas back in 1973.

The 63-year-old Irby has dressed the same way for every yearbook photo since that year, and the images of him in those treasured garments have shot around the world on the Internet and on YouTube.

Summer's more sweltering days lurk around the corner, so why not prep for a little mobile gaming in air conditioned spaces? Here are three gems from June.

Icebreaker - A Viking Voyage:

Backed by Angry Birds publisher Rovio's imprimatur, Icebreaker bravely enters the crowded physics puzzler field. While it's easy to tell the game is built on the shoulders of early classics like Cut The Rope, it quickly blooms into a wickedly funny world of varied levels with biting winds, dark magic and troll snot among their hazards. (iOS and Android/$0.99)

Home:

It's astonishing how unnerving the atmosphere in this horror game is, given the deliberately primitive graphics. Paired with a decent set of headphones, Home's series of disturbing discoveries should keep you gripped from the first second. A caveat if you're still angry about The Sopranos finale: The story design is intentionally vague and the ending provides more questions than answers. (iOS/$2.99)

Agricola:

The latest board game to get some digital love, Agricola puts you in charge of a farm. Keep your family from starving and figure out your livestock strategy (there's an action-packed term) to keep ahead of your rivals. The tutorial may be a bit dizzying for noobs, but Agricola is well worth the brain power. (iOS/$6.99)

RE: It's A Slippery Slope, Not All Cooking Oils Are Created Equal, Published July 2

As a practicing holistic nutritionist, I found this article very misleading, and confusing. I have different opinions than the writer of this article. One such difference is the statement written about soy, corn and canola oil. As a holistic nutritionist, I would tell my clients to avoid these oils. They are all GMO, genetically modified.

There are several studies that suggest GMOs can cause tumor growth and cancer.

"In fact, double stranded RNA (dsRNA) GMO created by Monsanto can allegedly turn off certain gene signals and turn on others. In mice who were fed this dsRNA, the liver completely changed its cell organization, and the mice grew strangely. The same effects were found when these dsRNA were added to human cells. Allegedly, this GMO food can be turning on cancer causing genes," says Natural Society.

Synopsis

In the 186 days that have passed since the Reel Guys drank too much champagne on New Year's Eve, Iron Man 3 has made more money than the GNP of some small countries, Fast & Furious 6 was faster and more furious than the previous five Vin Diesel car crazy movies and The Hangover Part III left us with a headache. At the midway mark of the year the Reel Guys look back at the best of the first six months of 2013.

Reel Guys

CROUSE AND
MARK BRESLIN

Warm Bodies is a zombie metaphor for awkward teen love — and a pretty well performed one at that. HANDOUT

The best of 2013 so far

Reel Guys approved.

At the halfway point of the year, Richard Crouse and Mark Breslin pick their favourite flicks of the last six months

Richard: Mark, it's been a weird year. Things that I was really looking forward to, like Melissa McCarthy and Jason Bateman in Identity Thief, fell really flat, but other things like the off-the-radar The Purge turned out to be really good fun. From the early part of the year I'd choose Warm Bodies, a zom com that is essentially one joke — the zombie as a metaphor for awkward teenager love — but a pretty good one and well performed. What about you?

Mark: Two blockbuster movies impressed me: Iron Man 3 and Star Trek: Into Darkness. But my two favourite movies of the year were Side Effects and Trance. Both were Hitchcockian thrillers that started out as one thing but cleverly morphed into something else. But I've always enjoyed mind games, Richard, as any of my detractors will tell you.

RC: I liked both Side Effects and Trance, but as far as thrillers go my pick of the litter would be The Bay, an eco-apocalypse horror movie from Diner director Barry Levinson. He assembles an eye-catching array of fictional news footage, phone camera images, surveillance videotape, Skype and "homemade" videos to tell the story and it will make you think twice before ever drinking tap water again!

MB: The Bay was interesting, although unfortunate product placement for the store. I liked The Great Gatsby a lot, although I knew the story all too well. The Place Beyond The Pines is an ambitious sprawling movie that has three connecting stories. The whole is less than the sum of its parts but most of it is worth its loooooong running time.

RC: My two favourite films so far this year have been Frances Ha and Before Midnight. Frances Ha stars the transcendent Greta Gerwig as a 20-something dancer trying to make it in New York City. Warm and charming, it captures the vagaries of a mostly rudderless life. Another movie I hope to watch over and over is Before Midnight, the third film in the Ethan Hawke-Julie Delpy relationship trilogy. Done with humour, heart and pathos, often in the same scene, it is a poignant farewell to two characters who grew up in front of us.

MB: I liked Frances Ha and I think it's the breakthrough role Gerwig has been looking for. But it was very similar to last year's Lola Versus, which I found funnier though not as artful.

HEAVY DUTY MECHANIC

Flagstaff County invites applications for a permanent full-time Licensed or 2nd to 4th year Apprentice, Heavy Duty Mechanic, with employment to commence as soon as a possible.

Flagstaff County provides a competitive salary, benefits package and pension plan.

FUNCTION: To perform skilled journeyman level maintenance and repair to a wide variety of vehicles and equipment as used by the County. (For a complete job description please view our website at www.flagstaff.ab.ca)

QUALIFICATIONS: Heavy Duty Journeyman Certificate an asset, Valid driver's license, CVP Inspection Experience an asset, Drivers Abstract

Drama

The Iceman

Director. Ariel Vroman

Stars. Michael Shannon,
Winona Ryder

Richard Kuklinski was a particularly puzzling personality, so it must have been tricky for director Ariel Vroman to craft much more than a fascinating surface-level biopic on The Iceman. The true tale of a 1960's family man-turned-cold-killing hitman for the mob, this drama may not uncover many psychological answers to Kuklinski's actions, but with mesmerizing performances led by Michael Shannon (Boardwalk Empire), The Iceman will still leave most audiences frozen in their seats.

Much Ado About Nothing

Director. Joss Whedon

Stars. Amy Acker, Alexis
Denisof

Those who recognize Joss Whedon mainly as the magical man in charge of The Avengers should walk into Much Ado About Nothing restraining any bombastic expectation. Filmed in black and white at his own mansion with little-known actors/friends, this low-budget adaptation of Shakespeare's comedic romance about two pairs of lovers with varied perspectives on love may fascinate fans of the Bard's prominent prose much more than the comic-book convention crowd.

Film goes Way, Way Back

Simmering script. The Descendants co-creators spent years trying to get their coming-of-age screenplay picked up

Jim Rash and Nat Faxon are arguably best known for aping Angelina Jolie — and her outstretched leg — at the 2012 Oscars.

Upon winning best adapted screenplay for The Descendants with director Alexander Payne, Rash settled into a proud pose, right leg extended for all to see, while Faxon adopted a less pronounced stance.

It was a pivotal moment that catapulted the duo into a new sphere of celebrity and Internet infamy.

Now they're hoping to become even better known for their directorial debut, the coming-of-age dramedy The Way, Way Back.

"It's this weird circle of life with this movie," Rash says of the film's long road to the big screen during a recent visit to Toronto.

He notes their script for The Way, Way Back bounced around Hollywood for years, eventually catching the attention of Payne.

The Sideways writer/director wasn't interested in making the film, but he was interested in hiring its writers for his own project, The Descendants.

Of course, that collaboration led to the Oscar, which in turn revitalized efforts to actually make The Way, Way Back.

"This movie did get us in the door, at least to have a meeting with The Descendants, and ultimately to get the job. And then from that journey to the Oscar it has allowed us to open this back up, which has been an eight-year journey," Rash says while seated alongside Faxon.

"When it gets too long in the foot, I think sometimes scripts sort of get forgotten about, you know, unless you really persevere and keep pushing."

To a certain degree, Rash and Faxon are used to being underdogs.

Their day jobs involve starring in low-rated but celebrated comedies — Rash on the little-seen but critically adored sitcom Community, and Faxon on the short-lived but warmly received sibling comedy Ben and Kate.

Before that, the longtime collaborators — alumni of L.A.'s famed Groundlings improv company — developed TV projects for years but were never able to get something for themselves on the air.

Rash notes that The Way, Way Back is rooted in his own childhood sense of inadequacy, taking its opening scene directly from an actual exchange he had with his stepfather at age 14.

"He asked me what I was on a scale from 1 to 10. I said 6 at the time, thinking that was very humble and a nice place to aim for. And he said I was a 3," he recalls.

"And then he went on to say that it was about me not taking advantage of our summer vacations in the sense that there were families with kids that I could meet and (I could) open up more in my life," continues Rash, who appears in the film as an eternally dissatisfied water park employee. "I like the idea of something that seems harsh and dramatic and hurts us at one moment becomes enlightening and funny and a you-needed-it-to-happen moment much later."

The Way, Way Back opens in Toronto today, in Vancouver on July 12, and in Calgary, Edmonton, Halifax, Ottawa, Victoria and Winnipeg on July 26.

Invasion of the maple syrup pod people

When Calgary-raised comedy writer Robert Cohen was a teen and vacationing with family in Hawaii, the Iran hostage crisis had just ended and local shops were giving Canucks free coffee and doughnuts for Canada's role in the rescue mission.

But when he and his brothers tried to take up a shop's offer of fried confections, the owner refused.

"He didn't believe we were Canadian because we didn't look like what he thought Canadians looked like," the 47-year-old Emmy Award winner said in a recent interview.

"He thought we had blue skin and that we wore furs and that we had icicles dripping off of our faces. Literally, that's what he thought."

Such misperceptions have led Cohen to embark on Being Canadian, a feature documentary project for which he's recruited a slew of stars — including Dan Aykroyd, Will Arnett, Michael J. Fox, Howie Mandel, Mike Myers, Jason Priestley, Paul Shaffer, Martin Short, Alex

Trebek, Conan O'Brien and Ben Stiller.

He and his small crew have also travelled across Canada to do interviews and visit landmarks. Their final stop was in Vancouver on Canada Day. Details can be found by searching Being Canadian on indiegogo.com, where Cohen and his team are running a fundraising campaign.

The writer/producer/director, whose long list of credits also includes The Simpsons, Saturday Night Live and The Ben Stiller Show, embarked on the film about two years ago after speaking at Toronto's Humber College about why Canada produces so many comics.

His research for that led to a deeper desire to probe what it means to be Canadian and why there seems to be "either a complete ignorance or a complete lack of interest" toward this country from those outside of it.

"It's not like people should be walking around talking about us all the time," said Cohen.

"But if you're outside of Canada, especially in the States, and you walk around ... people look at you and assume you're an American. But when you blow their minds by revealing you're not... So I enjoy that because you really see it in their eyes, having to do a reset."

"But we are the pod people that sort of live amongst them that, I don't know why, they freak out."

Where the ladies at? Bridesmaids director really wants to know

Female-fronted films.

The flick was supposed to be a breakthrough for the sisterhood, but Paul Feig again has the only big budget girl movie this summer

Metro World News in New York

Paul Feig may have co-created the beloved Freaks and Geeks with Judd Apatow, but it wasn't until he directed Bridesmaids that something he made himself was a success right off the bat.

He started out as an actor (and he still puts in appearances), but gradually slipped behind the camera, where he's directed lots of TV (including The Office, 30 Rock and Arrested Development).

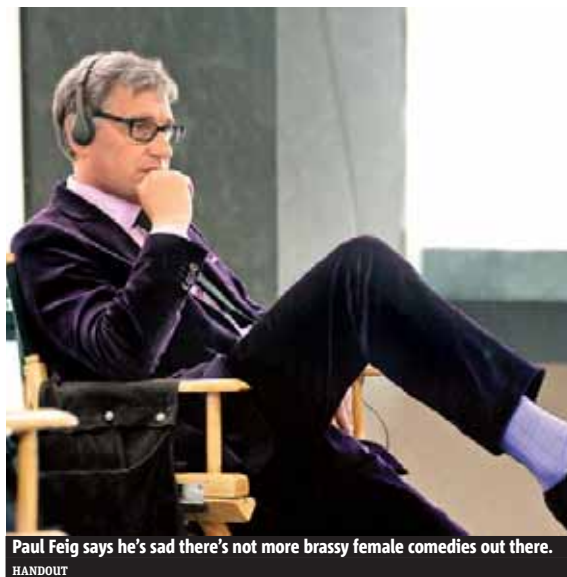

His fourth film, The Heat, reunites him with Melissa McCarthy, who pairs with Sandra Bullock for the only major movie this summer starring women.

What's it like directing comedy instead of performing it?

I love it, because for me, as an actor, I had my thing that I was good at, but I didn't have the range where I could do everything. Whereas with directing, I get to do that, because it's all about the people I hire. There are projects I have no business doing, but if you get the right people you figure it out. For me, the fun is finding the right people.

But your voice does shine through as a director.

That's what I like about movie directing. With television, which I love doing, you're a bit more of a facilitator. Whereas with movies you are the storyteller. Obviously you have writers and you're nothing

Paul Feig says he's sad there's not more brassy female comedies out there.

without them. But you're the one who says, "This is how it has to be." A cinematographer once told me about a star who directed something, and I asked, "How'd it turn out?" And he said, "Well, they did a good job but they had a bad script, so it didn't work out." As a director you can't fall back on, "Well, I had a bad script." It's your job to make that script not bad.

Did Sandra Bullock have trouble adjusting to this improv style of comedy, which she doesn't usually do?

She's the first to admit she was a little thrown the first couple days, at how loose we play. Then she really snapped into it. When I'm getting these worlds together, I do rehearsals with the actors very early on. I want the actor to fit their character so well that they can just become that character. Then it's not improv, it's just talking like that character.

Bridesmaids was supposed to start a rash of studio films starring women. But The Heat is one of the

Not a luddite

You still shoot on film, not video, correct?

Yes. On television, all I work with is HD. But with movies — I'm not a luddite, I just like film. It's very friendly to my actors in a way that HD isn't. There's a quality. I see a difference — I'm sure no one else does. I like grain. With this movie, I wanted it to feel like an old '80s cop movie. We shoot about 121/2 minutes per load, and with HD you can roll for an hour straight. I want those built-in breaks. Otherwise I'd get off schedule, and I'd wear out my actors. It keeps everybody on their toes.

I'm sad there's not more. But my first concern after Bridesmaids was there would be an onslaught of movies starring women that weren't really good and were just trying to be outrageous. But what happened is it went the other way: Nothing's happening. It's us, and the indie world is doing this, with The Bling Ring and The To Do List and Bachelorette. We're the only movie this summer from a studio with women in the lead role. I don't know what the hang-up is, but I wish they'd get going. I don't want it to be that everybody waits for me to do it.

What happened to girl power?

"I don't know what the hang-up is, but I wish they'd get going. I don't want it to be that everybody waits for me to do it."

Director Paul Feig on the seeming reluctance to make big studio female-led films

McFerrin's not going to worry, but there's more to him than his hit

Music. Singer most known for Don't Worry Be Happy, which he hasn't performed since 1988

For Bobby McFerrin, breaking new ground has always been synonymous with his music.

His concerts are a mixed bag of musical styles drawing from jazz, classical, blues, and numerous other styles. He's performed unaccompanied, scatting and riffing with his four-octave range, and at times, even used his entire body to make percussive sounds.

Yet most people know him for the feel-good a cappella tune Don't Worry Be Happy, even though the 63-year-old singer says he hasn't played the song in its entirety since 1988.

"The fans that come to my shows are excited with the music that I'm making, so they understand when I don't play it," McFerrin admits.

The 10-time Grammy Award-winning musician recently released his 14th album, spirityouall, a CD that's dedicated it to the legacy of his father, the former Metropolitan Opera star Robert McFerrin Sr.

The senior McFerrin, who died at age 85 in 2006, had a distinguished career as both a performer and educator. He also provided the singing voice for Sidney Poitier in the 1959 film version of Porgy and Bess.

The new record combines a unique selection of Americana, covering such classics as Every Time I Feel the Spirit, and Swing Low Sweet Chariot, as well as Negro spirituals.

"I wanted to honour him with some of the music he was known for," he says.

McFerrin remembers his father as a kind, yet tough man, especially when it came to his students. "He was nice, but he wouldn't sugarcoat anything," McFerrin remembers.

"After a student sang for my father, he wouldn't say, 'Oh that was nice, but...' He would pretty much say, 'I didn't like that' and immediately ask, 'Where were you breathing?' or, 'Do you know what that note means to the song?'" McFerrin recalls.

"If a student had him for a private lesson, it would be doubtful that they would finish the song by the time the lesson ended. He would pick apart everything they did, and while it was frustrating, they would become better singers. I've seen my father turn decent voices into very good ones by his technique."

Despite a stroke in 1989, the elder McFerrin appeared on his son's 1990 album, Medicine Music, and was a soloist with the St. Louis Symphony in 1993 with his son as guest conductor.

The younger McFerrin might be best known for the fun song Don't Worry Be Happy, but don't be fooled: He's got a powerful range and an uncanny ability to make music with anything.

"My shows are about music. It's classical. It's jazz. Negro spirituals. And the audience is a part of it, too," he says.

McFerrin is currently on tour in support of the new record.

Came Back Haunted/Nine Inch Nails

The video for the first single from September's Hesitation Marks was directed by David Lynch. Before you watch it make sure to read the health warning that comes with it. You heard me.

Better Energy/Moones

Using YouTube's annotations feature, you can control how drunk the UK band gets in this video. This one should come with a health warning, too. Then again, these guys are trained rock stars.

Parquet Courts are stoners but far from those slackers

Interview. New album Light Up Gold is showing a little of that prolific work ethic, as their latest effort is an exhilarating punk rush of excellence

PAT HEALY
Metro World News

Parquet Courts are stoners. Make no mistake about that. The Brooklyn-based quartet don't mind that press outlets have focused on this not-so-secret fact, revealed in song titles like, Stoned and Starving, Donuts Only and Yr No Stoner, on the band's excellent Light Up Gold album from earlier this year. But what bugs the band is when people throw around the term slacker.

"I think it's kind of a romantic image to conjure up this view of us as these vaga-

Lighting up, working hard

"The slacker thing really gets on my nerves ... We work extremely hard and as prolific as I am, I don't think that the slacker title is appropriate."

Parquet Courts

bond stoner/slacker dudes just traversing the U.S. and just barely scraping by," says singer and guitarist Andrew Savage. "But the slacker thing really gets on my nerves because it kind of implies that we don't work very hard, when in reality, this is one of the hardest working bands I've ever seen. We work extremely hard and as prolific as I am, I don't think that the slacker title is appropriate."

Light Up Gold showcases

that prolific work ethic, as the 15 songs bleed together in an exhilarating punk rush of 35 minutes. Twin trebled guitars sound like woven rays of sun, while the rhythm section sounds like a dinosaur rooting through your parents' garage. Savage's words are sometimes silly and often narrative, with a novelist's eye for detail. Parquet Courts jam, but never noodle. This is indie rock the way it used to be.

"People's curiosity has waned and they stopped kind of digging for stuff like that," says Savage when we bring up the dearth of current bands who draw from the likes of Pavement and Guided by Voices. "But I don't think it stopped. I think it just stopped being presented to people in the way that it was and the mainstream top 40 indie, to me it resembles kind of more easy listening and commercial pop music, so it's not coming through the same venues, but it never stopped."

Whether it's in the studio or the smoke circle, Parquet Courts are in session. KEVIN PEDERSON

Singer Feist not so feisty when it comes to using her social media like Twitter

Not exactly Da Vinci Code. Singer lets fans in on a way you can tell when it's actually her that's tweeting and not her PR people Feist has a little tip for people looking to know if she's actually written a tweet on her Twitter account.

"There's a code," she said Friday in advance of her show opening the Montreal International Jazz Festival that evening.

"If it says LF after, I wrote them. Otherwise someone smarter and more tech savvy than me wrote them."

The hint came in reply to a question about a tweet she'd supposedly written earlier in the day and which was quoted by a reporter. It wasn't anything controversial — just something about the weather. Feist looked a little puzzled and then said she didn't write it, crediting her manager with the somewhat poetic message.

Feist allowed she's not that feisty when it comes to social media.

"Normally in everyday life, I don't find a lot of occasion (where) I need to say a lot of things like that to many people at once," said the musician who goes by her last name professionally but whose full name is Leslie Feist.

She acknowledged that unlike some entertainers who use social media massively, she picks and chooses her spots.

"I do it on occasion," she said, citing her last appearance in New York when an outdoor concert got cut short by bad weather.

She was soaked and her gear was ruined but her heart

Despite some social media mix-ups, it's rarely hard to hear Feist. FRED CHARTRAND/THE CANADIAN PRESS went out to the crowd.

"They had been standing there for six hours and they were really wet and really psyched. To have to leave them, I felt terrible. I just wanted them to know it wasn't my decision to leave."

She struggled with how to communicate with the crowd and then had the brainwave to send them something on social media, "to beam into the palm of their hands that the conditions did this and not me and I hope they all get hot showers and that stuff."

Coincidentally, Montreal

weathered steady rain in the hours leading up to her show on Friday, a free outdoor affair.

Feist said she was aware of many conversations percolating on social media but didn't see how that would play into any kind of collaboration when she crafts her songs.

"It's a little bit intimidating for me. I prefer to think about what I'm doing from inside of it because the outside, it's a bit of a peanut gallery."

"I appreciate things like when I feel the wave of response from a group of people but each individual one's individual opinion might be a bit much for me to take in. I'm kind of a cautious observer of social media."

Feist, who performs both as a solo artist and as a member of the indie rock collective Broken Social Scene, launched her career in 1999 with the release of the now-scarce Monarch (Lay Your Jewelled Head Down), which was followed up by Let It Die in 2004 and The Reminder in 2007.

The critically acclaimed albums sold more than 2.5 million copies.

No cheese in this Mac, it's a full course meal

Mac Miller continues to progress as an artist. DAVE MARTIN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New music. Rapper Mac Miller matures, turns heads with his new album Watching Movies with the Sound Off

Mac Miller had a quick decision to make when Kanye West jumped the street date for his new album: Move his Watching Movies with the Sound Off to a different week or stand firm in the face of Yeezus. In the end, it was a simple decision. The album was too good to wait.

"I initially just wanted my own space for my album to drop and then Kanye's date came out and it was kind of like, 'OK, that's probably the worst person to go up against to drop an album,'" Miller said. "But I'm one of those weird everything-happens-for-a-reason type people, so I felt that maybe there's a reason I was dropping the same day as Kanye, and I think there was. I think it let people know that I have a long career ahead of me and I wasn't just anything that people put me as before."

More than meets the eye

Miller says the album's depth and quality reflects two years of warp-speed development

- Quote. "There was always a lot more to me than what people wanted to say."

Miller entered the Billboard 200 at No. 3 behind West and J. Cole, and much of the discussion that week revolved around Miller as interloper. How did Mac Miller find his way into the top three on the biggest rap release week of the year? And just how many sales did he take from West?

"It's dope," Miller said of the attention while eating curry backstage before his show Monday night at Marathon Music Works in Nashville. Miller sold more than 101,000 copies of the woozy, moody Movies, which features appearances or production work from Diplo, Flying Lotus, Earl Sweatshirt, Jay Electronica, Action Bronson, Schoolboy Q and Ab-Soul.

It's a redefining moment for the 21-year-old Miller. Cast as the goofy sidekick of Wiz Khalifa and known for his novelty song-turned-celebrity beef with Donald Trump, the quality of Miller's second album is making detractors re-examine his music.

Pitchfork called it "a quantum leap in artistry" and it's gotten solid reviews all around. He even outscores Cole on Metacritic.

Miller alludes to his public perception on the album in a skit at the end of Red Dot Music. He allows battle rapper Loaded Lux to go off on him for 90 seconds. Lux begins with "You was Cheesy Mac with the easy raps..." and it goes downhill from there.

"It kind of shows you that stuff like that doesn't matter," Miller said. "He ethered me on my own album, but the album still plays."

King Tut Decoded: TV doc looks at the boy pharaoh

Egypt. Film airing this week aims to answer more questions about mysterious Tutankhamen

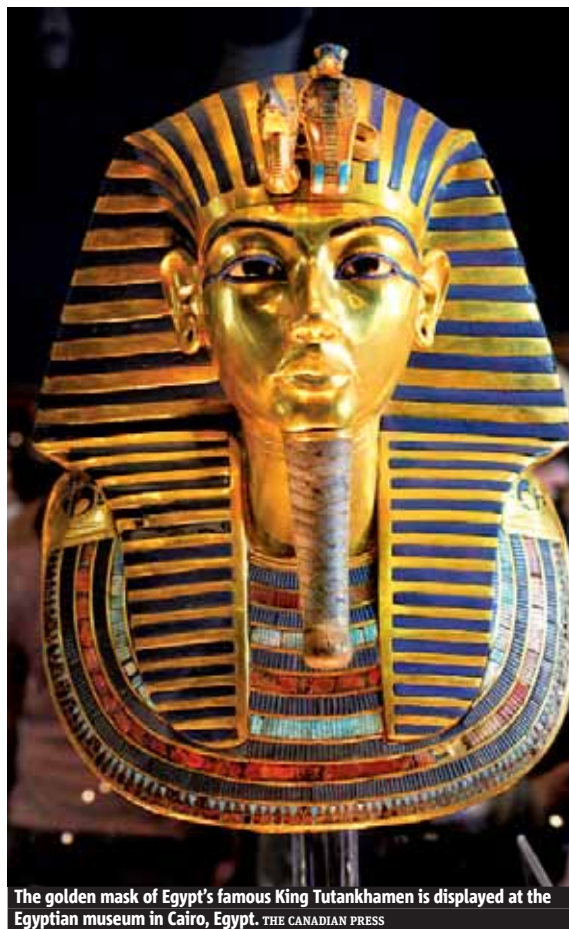

He's been dead for thousands of years, and his body was discovered nearly a century ago. And yet Tutankhamen — the mysterious boy pharaoh whose tomb was discovered intact in 1922 — continues to capture imaginations and fuel lingering questions that still baffle experts.

"It's far bigger than anyone could have possibly imagined, I think, and it's far bigger than anyone could really handle," said Chris Naunton, director of the Egypt Exploration Society. "In some ways, it's the great dream — an intact royal tomb of that period, as well. Tutankhamen wasn't as known or celebrated until he was discovered."

With this year marking the 90th anniversary of the tomb's discovery, Tutankhamen Decoded, the new Naunton-hosted documentary airing this weekend on History, aims to provide more answers to some of the big questions on the topic of Tut: How did he die? Why, with the Egyptian reputation for fastidiousness in burials, does Tutankhamen's burial seem rushed and error-filled? Why is there evidence of burning on the body? And why was his tomb found intact, when other resting places in the Valley of the Kings have been picked clean by looters?

"There's been a lot of work in the last few years, in particular on the mummy," said Naunton, 35, from his office in London. "There was a feeling that a lot of the loose ends around that hadn't really been tied up. So some specific lines of investigation had been picked up, but it was time for a bit of an overview."

Part of the investigation arose from a surprising oversight — that original discoverer Howard Carter died with many of his field notes unpublished. To answer some of those notes'

The golden mask of Egypt's famous King Tutankhamen is displayed at the Egyptian museum in Cairo, Egypt. THE CANADIAN PRESS outstanding questions, the documentary crew deploys the latest technologies, from CT scans of the mummy, rigorous digital recreations of the chariot collision Naunton believes killed Tutankhamen and chemical testing of the mummy's wrappings.

What they collect over the course of the hour-long film is a remarkable reminder that there is still so much to learn about the 19-year-old pharaoh.

Theories as to how Tutankhamen died have been myriad, from malaria to an accidental fall. Naunton's film posits a new theory for this aspect — that the war-faring pharaoh was killed in the heat of battle, struck across the chest by a speeding chariot. But while the technology supporting this theory has been around for a few years, it took this film to bring those elements together.

"It's just the nature of archaeology actually ... we don't always have access to that kind of technology, the experts that are required," he says. "It took in some ways a project like a documentary film ... to be the best possibility for uniting researchers from different fields. It's sad, but it's probably true, that these big multidisciplinary collaborative projects are all too rare, certainly too rare in archaeology and Egyptology."

Naunton is not sure how his community will receive his findings, as they have been closely guarded leading up to the premiere itself, and he and his collaborators are hoping to eventually formally publish them in a scientific journal.

The documentary will premiere on Sunday at 9 p.m. on History.

I'll be there for you: Perry pays it forward by opening home to addicts

Matthew Perry knows what it's like to hit rock bottom. He famously struggled with alcoholism and drug addiction during his Friends heyday. "Eventually things got so bad that I couldn't hide it, and then everybody knew," he told People.

Perry sought help, went to rehab, and got his addictions under control. He's recently decided to help others complete the same journey — he's turning his Malibu beach house into a men's sober living facility called Perry House. "It's nice for people to see that somebody who once struggled in their life is not struggling anymore," he said.

This is an incredibly generous and thoughtful gesture by the actor. Hopefully the neighbours will agree. Something tells me that Malibu beach dwellers aren't used to living next to rehab facilities.

Unlike the state of California, Barrowman wasted no time

John Barrowman, star of Doctor Who and Torchwood, married Scott Gill, his partner of 20 years, following the Supreme Court's decision to overturn the Defense of Marriage Act and Proposition 8 last week.

In a video posted before the ceremony, the couple are in the car on their way to tie the knot, looking exhausted but happy. "Thank you, Supreme Court; about time you made it legal," Barrowman said. "See you after the ceremony!"

The newlyweds posted a photo of themselves holding their wedding certificate on WhoSay. "We are now legally married. Thanks for all your great wishes. Jb and Scott," they said.

Call it "the curse of the adorbs." Eddie Redmayne, star of such films as Les Misérables and My Week with Marilyn, is a singing ginger with a cute British accent and a perpetually goofy, lovelorn expression. Of course women flock to him even when he's out cold.

Eddie was on a plane recently and attracted quite the following. "I fell asleep, and when I woke up the man next to me asked, 'Excuse me, are you someone important?' I must have looked confused. He explained: 'I'm asking because the stewardesses came over and were watching you sleep,'" he told GQ.

Don't get a big head about it, Eddie. They'd probably do that for any member of the Les Misérables cast.

Uncle Jay and Auntie Bey: North West gets nothing but best from parents' pals

North West is sure sitting pretty. Not only are her parents a Kardashian and a Kanye — neither exactly known for being restrained consumers — but she's got family friends like Jay-Z and Beyoncé to spoil her too.

The couple spent thousands on baby gifts for little North, a source close to the couple told the Sun. Gifts reportedly included personalized Christian Dior baby booties and an engraved sterling silver Elsa Peretti Padova baby set from Tiffany's, according to the Sun.

Apparently they brought their own daughter, Blue Ivy, over to meet North, as Blue is "old enough now to be really interested in babies." And, presumably, in plotting world domination with her fellow princess of pop.

Beyoncé and Jay-Z

Unsolved Miss-tery: Crowe tweets quick pic of anonymous bits

These days celebrities tweet nude selfies (either because they got hacked or because they don't know how Twitter works) with such regularity that it's hardly even newsworthy anymore. But Russell Crowe's Twitter mishap was notable in that the nether regions his hacker tweeted weren't his.

Crowe is currently in L.A. with his wife Danielle Spencer and their two sons. The couple reportedly split up last fall, but now things seem to be on the mend — although who knows how Danielle will react to this latest peculiar event.

Yesterday, Crowe's account tweeted a pic of a woman's naked pubic area, which was quickly deleted.

So who was the mystery crotch? It sounds like not even Russell knows.

"Hey, I don't know what that was. Just having a chat with Dani when the phone went ballistic. Sorry, gone," he tweeted immediately after the incident.

Stampede 101. How to get there, what to wear and what's new at this year's event

CANDICE WARD
For Metro

Despite the giant obstacle the Calgary Stampede faced this year, it's time again to dust off those cowboy boots, recall your line dancing skills and get your stomach ready for a mountain of mini doughnuts.

As the Calgary Stampede enters its second century Friday, Stampede-goers should brush up on their Stampede 101 before they hit the grounds.

Getting there

All Stampede-goers should give themselves a little bit of extra time to get down to the grounds as the flood has put a little extra pressure on Calgary Transit and parking around the grounds. If possible, extend your Stampede fun over more than one day to make sure you get in all the activities on your wish list and even discover a few new hidden gems around the park.

What to wear

Stampede is a great time of year to bring out your inner cowboy or cowgirl. Cowboy hats, boots, and all things western are the norm. If you are worried about your lack of western fashion, there are a number of retailers on site

Despite the recent devastating flooding, the Calgary Stampede will go on as planned this year. The Stampede runs from July 5-14. CONTRIBUTED who can have you dressed the part in no time. When stepping out onto the grounds, be sure to keep the weather in mind since the conditions in Calgary are known to be slightly unpredictable. "It might be warm or it might be rainy, so be prepared for both," said Kurt Kadatz, director of corporate communications with the Calgary Stampede.

What's new

The Calgary Stampede prides itself in offering Stampede-goers a new experience each year, with new attractions, food and entertainment. This year, get wet and wild in the Bell Aqua Ranch. The H2X Extreme Watershow will cool you off while you take in some of the world's top professional Jet Ski freestyle riders. Forget heading to Vegas when you can marvel at the Fountain Show at Stampede Park. And escape the heat or rain with the new Corral Show this year. Duke it out with another "family" as Caroline Rhea hosts Family Feud Live with a chance to win up to $50,000 over the 10 days.

It's all at your fingertips

Stay connected this Stampede with the new Calgary Stampede app at your fingertips.

The official Stampede 101 app is built for the iPhone, iPad, Android and BlackBerry (but not available to Z10), so most mobile customers will be able to access it and adapt their plans on the fly.

This free app will help you find your way around Stampede Park with GPS-enabled maps, set reminders for your favourite events and sync your schedule to your phone so you don't miss a single Stampede beat.

If it's music you are hoping to catch, stay up to date on your favourite Stampede performers and when they are set to hit the stage through the schedule feature and the "Who's Here" feature on the app.

This feature also comes in handy for rodeo and chuckwagon lovers since you can find out more about the athletes taking part in the 10 days of heart-stopping action.

The schedule allows you to view the events in order of the time they are taking place, or break them down to types of events — music, arts and culture, kids, or ag and animals.

For those who like to fly

The official Stampede 101 free app will help you find your way around Stampede Park this year. CONTRIBUTED by the seat of their Wrangler pants, download the app while you are on the grounds and find out what is going on right then and there.

And for all the social media junkies, keep in the know with the app's social tab.

This year, it is all about #Stampede101.

See others having fun around the park through the Instagram and Twitter feeds, and be the first to find out about exclusive contests and other fun surprises.

The Greatest Outdoor Show on Earth is also on Facebook, Flickr and YouTube.

But the sweetest part of app is that you have the inside scoop on where all the best pancake breakfasts will be held in the city. Simply click on "Pancake Breakfast," choose the date and click on the desired breakfast.

There are even maps included to make sure you arrive at the right destination. This app basically does everything except eat the pancakes for you.

The Calgary Stampede app is available through the App Store, BlackBerry App World and Google Play. CANDICE WARD

LIQUID ASSETS

California casts a shadow that makes it hard for anyone pressing grapes in other U.S. states to get noticed. So, though wine is made everywhere across the country, odds are you've only had Cali juice.

While there may be more exotic vine-growing locales, one of the coolest is Washington state — especially its Columbia Valley. I'm talking Clint Eastwood cool, folks. The landscape east of the Cascade mountain range reminds me of the backdrop for one of his spaghetti westerns.

How do they grow grapes in a desert? It's all about water management and some innovative cultivation techniques that have secured Washington the number two spot in wine production behind The Golden State.

Single varietal Washington reds typically have a robust, meatiness to their flavours and really show off the rustic personality of their terroir. That attractive forwardness is tempered in mega combinations of grapes, like 14 Hands Vineyards' 2010 Hot To Trot Red Blend ($15.25 to $19.99) — a merlot-led fruit-bomb that will charm grilled meats and open your palate to alternative American wines.

PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

Rewrite the salsa rules

With all of summer's bounty, there are plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables that make fantastic salsas. Scoop them up with chips or crackers, or add them to sandwiches, salads, burgers and tacos.

Strawberry-Fennel Salsa

- 1 fennel bulb, chopped
- 1 1/2 cups strawberries, hulled and diced
- 1 medium shallot, minced
- 2 tablespoons white balsamic vinegar or sherry vinegar
- 2 tablespoons fresh tarragon, minced
- 1/2 small hot pepper (such as jalapeno), minced
- Salt and ground black pepper

In a medium bowl, mix together the fennel, strawberries, shallot, vinegar, tarragon and hot pepper. Season with salt and pepper.

Apple-Pepper Salsa

- 1 large crisp-tart apple (such as Fuji or Gala), cored and chopped
- 2 bell peppers (any colour), cored and chopped
- 1 jalapeno pepper, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1/4 cup chopped fresh mint
- 1/4 cup chopped fresh cilantro
- 2 tablespoons cider vinegar
- 1 tablespoon lime juice
- Salt and ground black pepper

In a medium bowl, toss together the apples, peppers, jalapeno, garlic, mint, cilantro, vinegar and lime juice. Season with salt and pepper.

Cucumber-Corn Salsa

- 2 ears of corn, husks and silk removed
- 1 large cucumber, peeled, seeded and chopped
- 2 stalks celery, chopped
- 4 scallions, thinly sliced
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh dill
- Zest and juice of 1 lemon
- Hot sauce, to taste
- Salt and ground black pepper

Cut kernels from ears of corn. To do this, one at a time stand each ear on its wide end and use a knife to saw down the length of the cob. In bowl, combine the corn, cucumber, celery, scallions, dill, and the lemon zest and juice. Season with a splash of hot sauce, salt and pepper.

Cassis

It's all about staying high and dry this week and this is a great chance to visit Cassis, the charming bistro at the top of 17th Avenue. Run by Gilles Brassart, Cassis provides Calgarians with a taste of Southern French cuisine. The produce is handpicked from Market 17 next door and the wine list showcases the wonderful selection of French and Canadian wines from J Webb market. For reservations call 403-262-0036.

The Revival Tour

Folk music has served as a way for a community to share music, and Chuck Ragan's tour is set to bring a group of musicians from various bands together on one stage at Commonwealth. Two shows on Monday and Tuesday feature Ragan (Hot Water Music), Jay Malinowski (Bedouin Soundclash), Craig Finn (The Hold Steady), Tim Barry (Avail), and Miesha Louie (Miesha & The Spanks) on Monday; and Danny Vacon (The Dudes) on Tuesday.

Badlands Stampede Music Festival

A three-day music fest featuring electronic heavyweights Afrojack, Kaskade and Pretty Lights and Matt & Kim is going on at Canada Olympic Park from Friday to Sunday. Passes to Playboy Energy Drink's Friday, Saturday and Sunday event is $199 or single day passes are $99 and the whole thing goes down at Canada Olympic Park. More info: badlandsmusicfest.com.

DIIV with Bleachers and Gold

The Brooklyn band hit Commonwealth on Wednesday. For a group that hasn't been together that long, DIIV is doing remarkably well. The band has already managed to show up on Pitchfork's radar, getting praise for their brand of psychedelic twinged with a little bit of the Seattle rock sound. For more info, visit commonwealthbar.ca.

Le Cirque de Nuit's Lunari

Ladies and gentlemen, prepare to be dazzled with a night under the big top. Le Cirque de Nuit brings you another installment of their spectacular circus parties on Saturday July 13. As the night unfolds, partygoers will be treated to a menagerie of sights, sounds and carnival fun. There will be performances by go-go dancers, an illusionist, the vibe tribe gypsy circus and of course DJs. Information at cirquenuit.com.

Parade Day Eats

Friday is Parade Day and there are plenty of Stampede breakfasts to kick off The Greatest Outdoor Show on Earth. The Roadhouse is having a breakfast. So is Allstream. And the Mustard Seed is having a Stampede BBQ. Check out freestampede pancakes.com for a searchable listing of free flapjacks.

Bombers run down Als with Goltz's legs

Winnipeg backup quarterback Justin Goltz ran in a pair of touchdowns Thursday as the Blue Bombers downed the Montreal Alouettes 19-11.

The visiting Bombers, who also had two Mike Renaud singles and a Justin Palardy field goal, avenged their 38-33 loss at home last week as the 1-1 teams split a home-and-home series to start the season.

CFL. George back in Roughriders lineup after serving suspension for helmet-to-helmet hit on Tate Tearius George doesn't play the role of spectator very well.

The six-foot-four, 258-pound defensive lineman missed the Saskatchewan Roughriders' season-opening 39-18 win over Edmonton last week while serving a suspension. George was forced to watch the game on TV at home and got into hot water with his wife.

"It's real, real difficult because you're sitting at home and you're like, 'Man, I would have went that way,' or, 'Man, I would have done this,'" George said. "I was texting guys during the game so at halftime they had a couple of messages from me."

George was suspended for a helmet-to-helmet hit on Calgary quarterback Drew Tate in last year's West Division semifinal. The CFL issued the ban following the playoff game but ruled because the Stampeders had won that George would have to serve the suspension to start the 2013 campaign.

The good news for Saskatchewan is George is expected to start Friday night in the Riders' home opener against none other than Calgary.

"I'm the little kid out of the yard this week," said George. "I'm ready to play."

Like Saskatchewan, Calgary opened its season on a winning note, downing the B.C. Lions 44-32 last week.

Calgary running back Jon Cornish played a big role in the Stampeders' opening victory. He ran for 172 yards and scored two TDs against the Lions.

Calgary didn't emerge totally unscathed from its opening contest as defensive tackle Corey Mace suffered a season-ending shoulder injury.

Mace will now attempt to serve as a mentor to his younger teammates as he recovers.

NHL. Bruins trade young star to the Stars in seven-player deal

Tyler Seguin is headed to the Dallas Stars in a trade less than a week after Boston's general manager criticized the former No. 2 overall pick as needing to be a "better pro."

Seguin was sent to the Stars on Thursday in a seven-player deal also highlighted by steady forward Loui Eriksson joining the Eastern Conference-champion Bruins.

man Joe Morrow.

It was the first major move for new Stars general manager Jim Nill, who addressed the team's need at centre with Seguin, the No. 2 pick in 2010, and Peverley. The trade will allow Dallas's leading scorer, Jamie Benn, to move to his more natural spot at wing.

"Tyler is a dynamic player that will be a part of our core group for a long time to come," Nill said. "A player at his age, position and talent level (is) extremely difficult to acquire and we're thrilled to bring him into our organization."

Seguin, 21, won the Stanley Cup with the Bruins as a rookie and was their leading scorer and an all-star a year later. He dropped to a tie for third on the team in scoring during this past season's run to the Stanley Cup finals. Boston lost to Chicago in six games.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Don't worry if what you do today does not meet universal approval. If you aimed to please everyone, you would not get much done. And it would give them something else to moan about.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Words can hurt as well as heal, so think before you speak today or you could severely bruise a loved one's ego. Having said that, don't go to the other extreme and say nothing at all.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Your world looks pretty good at the moment but don't let that lull you into a false sense of security. Someone you do business with may try to rip you off over the next 24 hours.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Some people you have been dealing with lately are clearly greedy, but that does not mean you have to sink to their level. Protect your interests but do so according to the rules.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Unexpected events will throw you out of your stride today but in the greater scheme of things it's no big deal, so stay calm and stick with the program. You know what your target is — keep moving.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

You will find it easy enough to explain your point of view today but that does not mean everyone will understand. The sad fact is not everyone shares your quickness of mind.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Anything is possible if you believe in it enough. The danger today is that certain well-meaning people may try to persuade you to lower your sights a little. Aim ever higher.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

There are so many good things going on in your world, so many opportunities waiting to be exploited, that it would be a crime to just sit there and do nothing. What is it that would please you the most?

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Pluto in your sign places the focus on wealth, which means you need to take care when dealing with money matters. Don't think about how much you might make, think about how much you might lose.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Why is it that only you can see the answers? Why is it that everyone around you is blind to common sense? If you think like that then maybe the problem is really with you. People are different.

Pisces

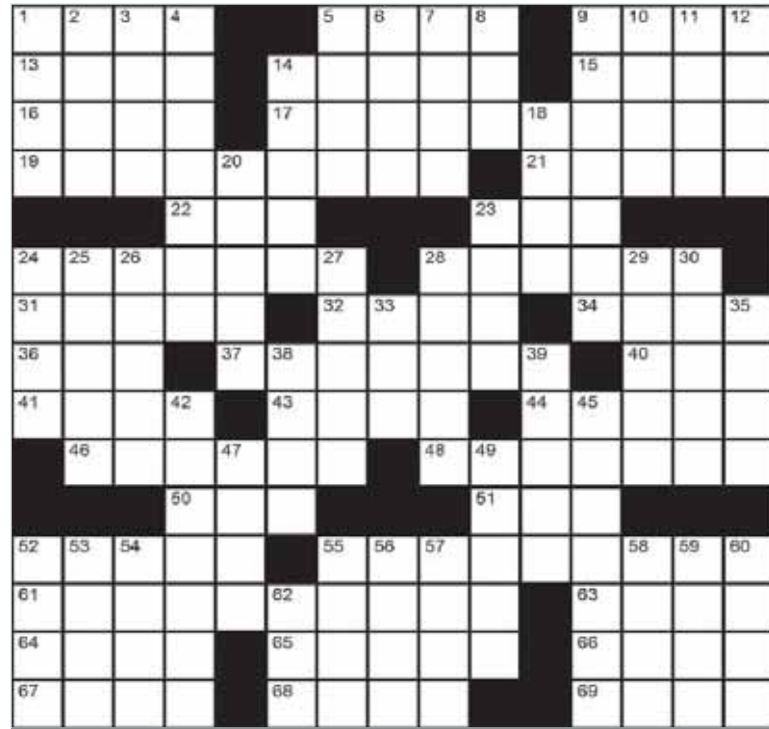

Feb. 20 - March 20

Love. Laughter. Learning. If you have these three things in your life then you are fortunate. What you learn today will make you laugh and the more you laugh the more you will love fellow man. SALLY BROMPTON

GOD OF RESTORATION

Have you been overwhelmed by the situation of life that the joy of knowing God has vanished? You can lift up your voice to Him like David did and say, "Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not thy holy spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit." (Psalm 51:11-12)
